

ABSTRACT

Optimizing tester performance using Operating Characteristics curves. By modeling the Operating Characteristics of classifiers used in testing systems, tester performance is optimized.

- 5 Classifiers are constructed using sample data. Operating Characteristic curves for each classifier are constructed, each Operating Characteristics curve representing a design alternative. The Operating Characteristic curves are combined with cost models from which design decisions may be made.